Message from the Managing Editor

The Binghamton University Undergraduate Journal is thrilled to present to you its 6th volume. Despite a delay due to the COVID-19 pandemic, the 6th edition continues to contribute to faculty mentored undergraduate research in the arts, sciences, humanities and social sciences. The continued support from faculty advisors and the work of the Journal's editorial board continues to present polished, insightful undergraduate papers from Binghamton University's student researchers. The University applauds the efforts of its exceptional students as they pursue interests in a broad range of disciplines and share this passion with their institution and beyond.

We in the External Scholarships and Undergraduate Research Center thank you for helping us to support the pursuit of knowledge and independent study of our students here at Binghamton University. This journal was made possible by the Editorial Team: Lisa Theo and Ernest Wang. Without their hard work, none of this would have been possible.

We recognize the dedication of our Editorial Board members, whose flexibility and guidance helped shape our journal and elevate student's voices to new heights.

The journal sends special thanks to Valerie Imbruce, our office director, for continuing to push for student excellence and recognition amidst difficult times.

Lastly, the Binghamton University Undergraduate Journal thanks you, for taking the time to read our student manuscripts and opening yourself to the research interests of Binghamton University students.

Thank you!
