One of the most important by-products of any professional organization is its publications program, through which the organization disseminates knowledge and information and voices its ethical standards. This first issue of Northeast Historical Archaeology is an attempt to provide a viable journal for The Council for Northeast Historical Archaeology and it is hoped that it will be a tangible workpiece upon which a far-reaching editorial policy can be established.

Every care was taken to make this issue representative of the highest possible standards. But, as with any new publishing venture, certain decisions had to be made arbitrarily in the interest of publishing within a definite timeframe. Though selection of the contents of this first issue was arbitrary, however, it was not without a great deal of thought. The feature pieces were chosen because they represented the major talk and that most closely connected with the setting of the Fall Symposium. In the case of the precis, each speaker was contacted and every article submitted was used, just filling the space available. The effort put forth by all contributors to meet the deadline is sincerely appreciated.
